SAVING ON THE GAS BILL.
A Good Plan Is to Cook an Oven Meal While Roasting Meat.
From the Los Angeles Herald.
Two or three times a week, boil or steam a large kettle of potatoes in the original packages, set them aside to cook, and verily, my daughters, they will seem as a treasure house of gold and silver. After you have been kept busy all day with the multitudinous duties which fall to the lot of every housekeeper, it will seem as a great weight lifted from your tired shoulders to have no potatoes to wash and pare at dinner time. A few from your treasure house may be stripped of their soft jackets in the twinkling of an eye, halved and browned in butter, and be ready to serve in no time. Escalloped, au gratin, hashed brown, Lyonnaise, German fried, breakfast hash, all may be served from this same reserve fund.

This arrangement saves not only time, but fuel, and the same plan may be followed in cooking meat. It is a waste of time and money to roast a small piece of meat. When you are preparing to cook either a pot or an oven roast, purchase a large one, for it will consume very little extra fuel in the cooking, and what is left from the first meal can be worked over into numerous dishes fully as tasty as the first one. Do you always plan an oven meal when you are roasting meat? Potatoes may be browned with the meat, escalloped corn or tomatoes, macaroni or spaghetti with cheese be baked for vegetable, pudding or pie for dessert—all for one gas bill.

To Clean Enamelware.
Enamelware that has become burned or discolored may be cleaned by rubbing with a paste formed by coarse salt and vinegar.

MORNING CHIT-CHAT.

THE superintendent of schools in one of our large cities won considerable notoriety recently by deciding that henceforth the boys, to a certain extent, should share the girls' sewing and cooking lessons.

Seems to me that notoriety ought to be fame.
For, if his innovation becomes a permanent custom, as I hope it does, it will probably mean the vanishing of that absurdly helpless type of man who can scarcely get himself a glass of milk and a rocker in his own home, and who, under no pressure of circumstances, would be able to make himself a cup of tea.

And I surely think that that disappearance would be a blessing to humanity.
"Oh, but I just hate a fussy man that thinks he knows all about your work, and is forever prowling around the kitchen," objected a lady to whom I was expressing my delight at this innovation.

So do I.
But I think it is a far cry from him to the man who doesn't know how to boil water, and I don't see why there isn't a happy medium.

I would be the last person to want to see a busy man regularly helping with the housework in his leisure hours. I think it is rank injustice to expect that. But I do think a little understanding of the work of housemaking, on the man's part, would make family life pleasanter, both by making the man capable of looking out for himself a bit when occasion demanded, and by giving him more respect for that share of the burden which his better half carries.

I think it would be a good idea if the superintendent's innovation could be carried from the school into the home, and boys, as well as girls, expected to take a hand in helping mother about the house.

A woman who evidently believes as I do on this subject, wrote me the other day to tell me how much help her four boys are to her.

"I am a mother of four boys and one little girl," she writes. "We live on a farm and as my husband has a man to help him, there is more work for the children inside the house than outside, so I have trained my boys to help me."

"Our eldest child, a boy of fourteen, can prepare breakfast when occasion demands as well as most girls of his age. The next, a boy of ten years, can wash dishes and sweep nicely and help care for the younger children."

"Our little six-year-old boy has made several nice gingerbreads when mamma was very busy. He measured everything very carefully, too."

"By having them all help, the work is divided so that no one has an onerous amount and I am given some leisure to be a companion to my boys, as well as the housekeeper."

"Do you think such work will make my boys unmanly?"
Most certainly not, madam.

On the contrary, I think helping their mother will make them more considerate and more truly manly men, and I wish more boys had a similar training.

SOME SLEEVE TIPS.

As This Part Is Cut, So the Blouse Inclines.

From Women's World.
The sleeve question is always interesting. Quite the smartest effects are produced by cutting the sleeve in one with the body, and a waist formed in that way is called the peasant blouse.

There are various forms of it, including the yoke and oversleeve, besides an entire sleeve and waist combination.

The undersleeve when used is generally plain and close fitting, though the material may be a handsome lace, and the entire sleeve cut in this way is seldom full length. In fact, the three-quarter sleeve is almost obligatory for any garment that pretends to be dressy, even for the handsome street suit.

Coat sleeves are usually finished with cuffs, the cuffs being of the cloth, velvet or fur.

Thoughts on Love.

The beginning, middle, and end of love is a sight.

Some loves, like some fevers, have three stages—the latent, the eruptive, and the convalescent.

One thing is impossible to love; the intensest and most fervent love is powerless to evoke love.

The mind often argues that esteem will grow into passion. Woman knows the argument is utterly fallacious.

Even the love of a married pair, unless it retains something of the romance of courtship, is apt to go out.

Love creates a world of its own—a world populated by two.

Cauliflower.

When preparing cauliflower, remove all but the innermost green leaves; trim off the stalk and soak, head downward, in salted water. This will draw out any insects which may be concealed among the flowers. Cook, stalk downward, in boiling salted water until the stalk can be easily pierced. When done, the head may be served either whole with a cream sauce poured over it, or the flowers may be carefully separated and reheated in the sauce.

FASHION HINTS

The separate blouse pictured here is a veiled model with the very popular Japanese sleeve, Chiffon or Clifton Cloth, which has very much more body, is generally used for these waists, veiling either a plain contrasting color or something in Persian effect.

Sweet Potato Croquettes.

The dry sweet potato may be either boiled or baked, and excels when transformed into croquettes. For this, put through a ricer after boiling; add to each pint salt and pepper to taste, and a heaping tablespoonful of butter; when cool enough to handle, shape into croquettes, egg and crumb them, and fry in deep, smoking hot fat.

Novelties in Washington's Smart Shops

By DOROTHY AVERY HOWARD.

The various fruit shops of Washington are now ripening the queer looking fruit we know as Japanese persimmons. Unlike our own fruit of the same name, they do not need the frost's biting touch to make them palatable—no wry faces are noticed when eating them. The Japanese often put them in alcohol in an air-tight barrel, and after the liquor has evaporated, the fruit has a delicious flavor. Most people eat them just as we do our own persimmons, but many like them for breakfast served with rich cream.

In a fruit shop in F street near the corner of Thirteenth they may be found in just the right condition to eat, selling at 10 cents apiece or three for 25 cents.

A novelty in a tea or coffee strainer is shown by a jeweler in G street between Ninth and Tenth, marked at 25 cents. It is of plate ware and has a little pan under the strainer to catch the drippings which invariably spoil one's linen while the beverage is being poured. It works with a little spring which allows it to slide in the right position when ready for use.

A firm of florists in F street near Thirteenth has some attractive gift baskets of artistic design which will fill with the new Mrs. Taft roses or other fragrant flowers for the small price of $1. For a friend who is ill, or to mark some birthday or other happy occasion, when remembrances are in order, these are very appropriate.

In the shop of an importer of Japanese linens, kimonos, and novelties, in Fourteenth street between F and G streets, I saw recently some odd and pretty photographs of Japanese silver, decorated in repousse designs of chrysanthemums or dragons, which cost only 25 cents for the average size. I have never seen them priced so low.

Stenciled designs are much in vogue for curtains, pillow tops, draperies, and other interior decorations for the house beautiful. With a good pattern, some cheesecloth, a brush, and some paint a novice can make some very dainty curtains for a boudoir, choosing a color to match the wall paper and furnishings. A friend of mine, who is an artist in stenciling, although she has had no special education in art, has one of the prettiest rooms I ever had the privilege of entering, and all the draperies were made by herself of 5-cent cheesecloth, decorated with an attractive poppy design in pinks and blues. The bedspread, canopy, pillow shams, couch cover, dresser, and washstand scarfs were of white lawn, with a border of the same colors, and under these, and used as a valance and lining, appeared the windows, and for the canopy of the bed was pink satin. The effect, as you may imagine from this rather crude description, was dainty enough for the daintiest girl in town. A beautiful room can be made with a color scheme of pale yellow, especially with a room which has deep cream or tan side walls and woodwork in old ivory paint. The stencil outfit may be bought at a store in Seventh street, between D and E, which sells artists' and painters' supplies, or if one already has the brushes and paints, the patterns can be had in a variety of beautiful designs, priced from 10 cents up, according to the size and the cutting.

A popular haberdasher in F street near Thirteenth has just received some handsome new bathrobes for men, which are also liked by girls with masculine tastes for tailored house clothes, as well as those for the street. Indeed, some of the new robes were ordered to please a young woman of this city who affects mannish styles. Among them is a beauty of gray and white blanket cloth finished with a cord in the same shades. Another style is shown developed of a new gray material having the appearance of crepe de chine, lined with blue silk and quilted, having cuffs, collar, and pockets of the dark color. Either makes a very handsome robe.

Among the cleverest Halloween novelties I have seen are some shown by a confectioner in Fourteenth street above F. They include figures nearly a foot high, of funny little men with pumpkin heads—jumping-jacks—some with banjos which go twang, twang, when a string is pulled; others who take off their steepled hats with a sweeping bow, and still others whose tongues protrude like a naughty boy's when he means to be impertinent. A unique favor shows the master of the lower regions, or one of his imps, all dressed in red, like his prototype, Mephisto, astride a bonied with a bag of bonbons on his back. Many other attractive favors are noted, all intended to be filled with the celebrated candies made in this shop.

A firm of leather importers in G street near Fourteenth has some good values in new mesh bags of gun metal which are shown in all sizes. Nothing is so suitable for the woman who dresses in mourning. Small bags may be bought here as low as $7.50, which are of genuine gun-metal. Others have coin purses, inside which are attached with a hinge adjustment and can be lifted outside of the bag when car fare or small change is wanted.

A decided novelty in jewelry is exhibited now in the window of a novelty jewelry shop in F street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth. This is the magnet, a pin worn like a brooch in a bow or jabot of tulle or lace at the throat, and supposed to bring luck, like the horseshoe. It is of 14-karat gold on sterling silver and set with sapphires and brilliants. It makes a most effective ornament, and is cheap at its price, $3.50.

A new dress that shows the very lavish use of fur which fashion dictates for this winter is seen in a ready-to-wear establishment in Seventh street near Pennsylvania avenue. It is of the modish velvet, which is of imitation baby lamb at the hem of the skirt, which is of the modified hobble style. The bodice has revers of the fur, which are wide at the shoulders and quite narrow at the bust, and a band of fur trims the sleeves. A small yoke and collar of cream Mechlin lace matches the cuffs, which finishes a very stylish gown.

A firm in Pennsylvania avenue near Eighth street, which has always carried just a line of men's and children's garments, has recently added a stock of women's tailored hats in very nobby styles. The new velours, velvets and fine French felts are shown in new walking shapes, or small hats for everyday wear. A round hat of French felt had a trimming of black taffeta, cut on the bias and edged with white fur, with a bow at one side. This was very much admired. Others which were quite large and had crushable crowns were also very smart.

HEART and HOME TALKS

by Barbara Boyd

This letter from a husband has a thought in it for wives:
"Pardon my taking your time for what may seem to you a trivial matter. But, naturally, I want my wife to be perfect. She seemed to me the ideal woman when I married her. But since I have noticed little things that show a flaw, and I wonder sometimes if one should let 'an unnoted or speak about them before they get to be serious, and thus, perhaps, prevent the development of traits that, certainly are inimical to happiness. This summer she and her sister went to the shore together for a little vacation. In one of my letters I said: 'Give Kitty (that's her sister) my kindest regards and tell her I hope she is having a good time.'"

"Surely, nothing could be more harmless. Yet my wife refused to give the message to her sister, and was hurt because I did not hope she was having a good time. It's a little thing, but I do not like the disposition it shows. It implies my wife is what some people call 'catty,' which, though I am no lover of cats, I think is a libel on them. What would you advise me to do? Take her to task for it or pay no attention to it?"

The term "catty" is flung at women for such ungenerous little actions as this. A woman had a little gathering of friends to say farewell to a girl going abroad for some time. One of the party offered to lend the voyager some books on history, but the girl said she did not care for them as she had studied history at school. To be sure, her refusal was not just as nice as it might have been, but this was no excuse for the other woman saying, maliciously: "Oh, but that was so very long ago."

The "catty" trait, if it is in one's disposition, will crop out in one form or another, and a woman if she finds she is given to it, is wise to take it in hand. It is a habit that will grow upon her until she will be continually making mean little speeches, and will grow to view the world in suspicious, ungenerous ways. Friends will flee her, and life will become a waste.

This husband will do well to talk the matter over lovingly with his wife right at the outset. If he puts it to her as he has in this letter, that she is his ideal woman and he cannot bear to find the slightest flaw in his ideal, she will undoubtedly respond quickly to his wish. She will be a foolish woman, indeed, if she deliberately shatters his faith in her goodness, and shatters it for such a trivial, foolish, easily cured habit—easily cured, that is, if she takes it in hand at once.

It is not too small a matter to write about. If these little matters that have so much power to spoil the happiness of the home were checked at the very outset, many a husband and wife would still be dwelling in the Eden of their dreams, instead of wandering desolate outside in the wilderness.

Prayer for Lovers.

Composition of Rauchenbush in Magazine.

The October American Magazine leads off with a prayer for "All True Lovers," by Walter Rauchenbush:

"We invoke thy gentlest blessings, our Father, on all true lovers. We praise Thee for the great longing that draws the soul of man and maid together, and bids them leave father and mother and all the dear bonds of the past to cleave to each other. We thank Thee for the revealing power of love which divides in the one beloved the mystic beauty and glory of humanity. We thank Thee for the transfiguring power of love which ripens and ennobles our nature, calling forth the hidden stores of tenderness and strength in the young and overcoming the selfishness of childhood by the passion of self-surrender."

"We pray Thee to make their love strong, holy, and deathless, that no misunderstanding may yet to come, and no gray disenchantment of the years may have power to quench the heavenly light that now glows in them. May they early gain wisdom to discern the true values of life, and may no tyranny of selfishness and no glamour of cheaper joys slice from them the peace and satisfaction which only love can give."

"Grant them with sober eyes to look beyond these few days of friendship to the generations yet to come, and to realize that the home for which they long will be part of the sacred tissue of the body of humanity in which Thou art to dwell, that so they may reverence themselves and drink the cup of joy with awe."

From Harper's Weekly.

Grape Sago Pudding.

Soak one cupful of sago over night in plenty of cold water; put the sago in a double boiler with one cupful of boiling water, one-half cupful of sugar, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, and one cupful of juice pressed from grapes which have been steamed and cooked for ten minutes. Cook until the sago is clear, adding more grape juice if it becomes too stiff; then add one cupful of seeded grapes, cook ten minutes more and turn into a baking dish. Brown in a quick oven and serve with a creamy sauce.

Broiled Fish.

For broiling any good-sized, firm-fleshed fish may be selected. It should be split from head to tail, carefully cleaned, and will seem even better than usual if at the same time the backbone is removed. The fishmonger will always do this on request. Each half should be brushed with melted butter and the halves then laid in a fine wire broiler and cooked, flesh side downward at first, over a clear fire. A five or six pound fish will require fully twenty-five minutes.

How She Earned It.

"Cultivate a little more sunshine in your disposition, my dear," said Mr. Dubbley. "Happiness and success in life depend upon the quantity of rays one emits."

"Very well, John," replied Mrs. Dubbley. "I'll do my best, but I think I'd be happier and more successful in the bargain if you would emit a ten-dollar raise in my allowance."

To Fasten Buttons.

If a small piece of cold folded double is put underneath buttons, particularly in children's clothes, they will not tear out so easily.
